

BERNBABYLON

From Bern to Babylon and about everything in between and beyond.

7–9 November 2024, Bern

Call for Contributions

BERNBABYLON is a laid-back space where researchers from diverse areas and disciplines can mingle and share ideas. Whether you're a wordsmith, an archæology enthusiast, or an art history buff working on Mesopotamia, Anatolia, the Levant, Egypt, the Arabian Peninsula, Iran, Central Asia, or the Aegean – your presence is eagerly awaited! Join us for a vibrant exchange of knowledge and experience. We encourage you to take advantage of this opportunity to introduce new ideas and projects, regardless of their scale, and engage with experts from diverse fields. In order to stimulate exchange of ideas and benefit from personal interaction, BERNBABYLON is an on-site event.

Talk

We welcome original research papers, case studies, and practical insights. We seek academic quality tailored for a non-specialist audience, presented in a concise and communicative manner. Please ensure that all citations and images in your PowerPoint are accurately and visibly referenced. It is crucial that the language used in your slides adheres to grammatical correctness and precision, following scientific standards.

Duration: Maximum of 20 minutes.

Book Presentations

Showcase your recently published scientific monograph or fiction literature in a casual ambience accompanied by a delicious cup of coffee.

Duration: Maximum of 10 minutes.

Workshop

Workshops should feature presentations, discussions, and hands-on activities, providing participants with an immersive experience. We invite researchers, practitioners, and enthusiasts to submit programs for engaging and interactive workshops at BernBabylon. We welcome original research papers, case studies, and practical insights related to the workshop theme.

Duration: 3 hours.

Date: Workshops will be scheduled on 7 November 2024
